1. The entire youth of the national minorities of Yugoslavia has been mobilized into "national minority brigades" which are attached to labor camps carrying out forced labor projects. These brigades are made up primarily of Albanians and Bulgarians, as well as Hungarians, Slovaks, Rumanians, Russians, et cetera. These labor camps are actually concentration camps where work is conducted under very difficult conditions.
2. The best known camps of this type for the Albanians from the Kosovo and Metohia region are located as follows:
 - a. At Otahovo; 420 persons.
 - b. At Debar, in the chrome mines; 350 Albanians.
 - c. At Trepce, in the mines; 1,800 Albanians.
 - d. At Decani; 2,600 Albanians.
3. The Greek minority and children of the former Marko partisans live in so-called colonies and Peoples' Clubs (Narodni dom), where they are trained in the spirit of the Tito regime. The children are taught Serbo-Croatian for four hours per day and work four additional hours in the field. They are forbidden to speak in their mother tongue.
